

The background of the entire page is an abstract composition. It features a prominent wood grain pattern in shades of yellow, tan, and brown. Overlaid on this are several large, semi-transparent geometric shapes, including a large circle in the center and various triangles and polygons in shades of grey and black. The overall effect is a complex, layered texture.

The Long Nails of Doctor Ochodedos.

1. Nail up to the moon.

He waited so long, Dr. Ochodedos, for his experiment to be approved by the "Gjulob" council, which grew his nails until the first moon, which they called "Dewuytryu."

2. Medusa of monstrous nails.

As I approached the planet, from space, it seemed that a monstrous jellyfish, in its agony, tried to take the moon with it to the depths of some ocean of madness.

3. Cut your nails, doctor!

The ministers, mayors and pharaohs went to the place where the doctor lay. "Sir," - they said - "you are hampering the natural evolution of our satellite, which could cause tidal distortions and poor potato growth. In addition, it has drawn the attention of an extraterrestrial metamorphic robot, which could pose a serious risk to the security of the planet. Cut your nails, doctor! "

4. The trip to the nail clipper shop.

After trying with nail clippers, chainsaws, backhoes and nuclear bombs, it was assumed that it would be very difficult to cut such long nails. So they sent me on a trip to the giant planet "UUUUUR" to acquire a megaultracortauñazas that cost me the modest price of a joke.

5. The complex nail cutting operation.

The study of a hundred scientists, architects and engineers was required to perform the nail cutting. Cranes from all parts of the planet came. Singers, dancers, human towers and street vendors encouraged the event, which was attended by thousands of people.

6. Cut nails, moon back to the planet.

The moon had become so accustomed to being held that, once released, it turned out that it had forgotten to float. It fell on the planet causing a terrible fracture that, in passing, freed the underground giants. But that's another story.

Las Largas Uñas del Doctor Ochodedos.

1. Uñas hasta la luna.

Tanto esperó, el doctor Ochodedos, para que su experimento fuera aprobado por el consejo de “Gjulob”, que le crecieron las uñas hasta la primera luna, la que llamaban “Dewuytryu”.

2. Medusa de uñas monstruosas.

Al acercarme al planeta, desde el espacio, parecía que una monstruosa medusa, en su agonía, intentase llevarse consigo la luna hacia las profundidades de algún océano de locura.

3. ¡Córtese las uñas, doctor!

Los ministros, alcaldes y faraones acudieron al lugar donde yacía el doctor. “Señor,”-le dijeron-“está usted obstaculizando el devenir natural de nuestro satélite, lo que podría provocar distorsiones en las mareas y poco crecimiento de las patatas. Además, ha llamado la atención de un robot metamórfico extraterrestre, lo que podría suponer un grave riesgo para la seguridad del planeta. ¡Córtese las uñas, doctor!”

4. El viaje hacia la tienda de cortauñas.

Después de intentarlo con cortauñas, motosierras, retroexcavadoras y bombas nucleares, se dió por supuesto que sería muy difícil cortar unas uñas tan largas. Me enviaron, pues, de viaje al planeta gigante “UUUUUR” para adquirir un megaultracortauñazas que me costó el módico precio de un chiste.

5. La compleja operación de corte de uñas.

Se requirió el estudio de un centenar de científicos, arquitectos e ingenieros para realizar el corte de uñas. Grúas de todas las partes del planeta acudieron. Cantantes, bailarines, torres humanas y vendedores ambulantes animaban el evento, al que acudieron millares de personas.

6. Uñas cortadas, luna de vuelta al planeta.

Tanto se había acostumbrado la luna a estar sujeta que, una vez liberada, resultó que se había olvidado de flotar. Cayó sobre el planeta provocando una terrible fractura que, de paso, liberó a los gigantes subterráneos. Pero eso... ya es otra historia.
